

NYTimes Magazine article details allegations of sexual harassment, discrimination at Signet Jewelers' stores
Tuesday, April 23, 2019 01:04:54 PM (GMT)

- In a feature article, the NYT Magazine chronicles allegations that "thousands of women" employed at Signet Jewelers subsidiary Sterling Jewelers and its stores including Kay Jewelers and Jared the Galleria faced "unequal pay, harassment, or worse" while working at the company
- Many of the claims are currently being pursued in an arbitration case that received class action certification in 2015, though the initial number of claimants was reduced after Sterling successfully appealed a portion of the certification ruling. That decision is currently under appeal in federal court
- StreetAccount notes the Washington Post previously reported on allegations of sexual harassment and discrimination at Kay and Jared stores back in February 2017 (see linked comments for reference)
- Full article can be viewed through the link below

Reference Links:

- NY Times Magazine

Industries: Retail (Specialty)

Primary Identifiers: SIG-US

Related Identifiers: SIG-US

Subjects: Articles, Reports, Litigation, Media Summaries

Related Stories:

- Signet Jewelers issues statement on ongoing arbitration
- Hundreds of former employees allege sexual harassment discrimination at Kay and Jared jewelry - Washington Post