On September 7, 2017, EFX revealed that its systems were vastly hacked and impacted nearly 143 million U.S. consumers. This news drove the price of EFX shares sharply down during intraday trading on September 8, 2017.

The Company reported that the information accessed includes names, Social Security numbers, birth dates, addresses and, in some instances, driver's license numbers. In addition, credit card numbers for approximately 209,000 U.S. consumers were accessed.

EFX said it learned about the unauthorized access on July 29, 2017, but before publicly revealing the data breach, the next trading day, on August 1, 2017, the Company's Chief Financial Officer sold 6,500 shares of EFX at an average price of $145.596 per share for total proceeds of $946,374. The same day, another insider sold 4,000 shares of EFX at an average price of $146.0247 per share for total proceeds of $584,098.80.

Then, on August 2, 2017, a third insider sold 1,719 shares of EFX at an average price of $145.70 per share for total proceeds of $250,458.30. The Form 4s filed with the SEC for these insider sales do not identify the sales as executed under a 10b5-1 trading plan.

In addition, there was unusual option activity in late August that could have exploited inside knowledge of the security breach, in order to profit handsomely.

"We're focused on what appears to be suspiciously timed insider selling within two trading days after the Company said it discovered the breach, the option activity and why management took so long to inform investors of the breach," said Hagens Berman partner Reed Kathrein.

Whistleblowers: Persons with non-public information regarding EFX should consider their options to help in the investigation or take advantage of the SEC Whistleblower program. Under the new SEC whistleblower program, whistleblowers who provide original information may receive rewards totaling up to 30 percent of any successful recovery made by the SEC.
