The Great Place to Work World's Best Multinational Workplaces list ranks the top 25 global companies in terms of workplace culture, based on global surveys of multinational companies and their associates. Qualifying companies must have placed on at least five national Great Place to Work lists, have 5,000 or more employees worldwide and have at least 40 percent of their workforce based outside of the company's home country.

"We are extremely proud to be recognized as a top global company to work for," said Arne M. Sorenson, President and Chief Executive Officer. "We are especially proud of the dedication of our associates to supporting each other and to passionately serving our guests and the local communities. It's that spirit to serve others that distinguishes the Marriott workplace."

"This multinational recognition is further validation that our people-first culture, centered on promoting the wellbeing of associates and creating opportunity for all, is the most sustainable way to lead a business," said David A. Rodriguez, Executive Vice President and Global Chief Human Resources Officer. "When people feel they are on the path to better personal health and financial security, and are proud of their company's inclusive workplace and citizenship, they become highly committed to its mission."

Marriott's emphasis on talent development, diversity and inclusion, and wellbeing has landed the company on many best places to work lists, including LATINA Style 50 Best Companies, National Association of Female Executives Top 10 Companies, FORTUNE 100 Best Companies to Work For and DiversityInc Top 50 Companies. Marriott has also consistently received global recognition as one of the world's best employers by organizations such as Fortune magazine, Great Place to Work® Institute and Aon.
