

Intuit's TurboTax resumes e-filing for states
Saturday, February 07, 2015 07:20:46 PM (GMT)

- Intuit announced that TurboTax has resumed e-filing of state income tax returns. The company continues to work with the states as they build their own anti-fraud capabilities and will share best practices as it works toward the best interests of the taxpayer.
- The resumption comes after the company temporarily paused transmissions upon seeing an increase in suspicious filings and attempts by criminals to use stolen identity information to file fraudulent state tax returns and claim tax refunds. During that time, Intuit worked with states that had raised concerns over state tax fraud.
- After working with third-party security expert Palantir on a preliminary examination of recent fraud activities, Intuit believes that these instances of fraud did not result from a security breach of its systems. As a result of that examination, which is ongoing, Intuit implemented targeted security measures to combat the type of fraudulent tax activity that it is seeing. These additional steps include the implementation of Multi-Factor Authentication, a proven technology for protection against identity theft.
- Filing of federal returns was not affected.

Industries: Software & Programming

Primary Identifiers: INTU-US

Related Identifiers: INTU-US

Related Stories:

- H&R Block aware of potential fraudulent tax returns, but no indication that it exists with state e-filing - Bloomberg
- Intuit says state filing to be fixed in hours not days-- Bloomberg, citing spokeswoman