The Lawsuit

Signet is charged with making false and misleading statements and omissions related to the Company's operations in violation of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The allegations involve Signet's subsidiary, Sterling Family of Jewelers ("Sterling"), which operates stores under brand names including Kay Jewelers and Jared. The lawsuit alleges that the Company publicly downplayed serious issues of sexual harassment that were alleged by employees in a private arbitration proceeding. On February 26, 2017, however, the public gained access to 249 declarations by current and former Sterling employees that painted a picture of the Company in which sexual harassment is not just tolerated but modeled by top executives. Further, a February 27, 2017 Washington Post article quoted the arbitrator stating, "[f]or the most part Sterling has not sought to refute this evidence." After trading closed on February 27, 2017, Signet's common stock price plunged.
