In its eighth annual Environmental, Social, Governance \(ESG\) and Citizenship Report released today, KKR identifies key global challenges that can affect its companies, that its companies can impact, or both. Further, the report outlines the steps KKR is taking to collaborate with these businesses to improve operations and performance. It also explains the Firm's commitment to providing an unrivaled employee experience and to strengthening the communities in which it operates.

Focused on ESG and citizenship issues, the report provides a fresh look at KKR's commitment and approach to responsible investment, which involves the thoughtful consideration of ESG factors in the decision-making process and management of companies, including more than 100 private equity companies and nearly 700,000 employees around the world.

"We see both opportunities and risks on the horizon and proactively partner with our portfolio companies to thoughtfully manage them," said Elizabeth Seeger, Director of Sustainable Investing at KKR. "Our understanding of how ESG issues can drive value helps us invest responsibly while also producing better outcomes for our clients, companies and communities."

The six challenges identified in the report include adapting to climate change, supporting better agriculture, managing resource constraints, investing in infrastructure, treating and preventing disease, and focusing on employees. This focus on the workplace is a new global challenge identified in this year's report, in addition to the five global challenges highlighted in previous reports.

"Private capital plays a major role in solving some of the significant challenges facing our society. We believe we must contribute solutions and, in this report, we share how we are positioning our firm to do just that," said Joe Bae and Scott Nuttall, Co-Presidents and Co-Chief Operating Officers of KKR.
