

Target CEO focusing already-stretched attention on data breach - WSJ
Friday, January 24, 2014 03:12:54 AM (GMT)

- A person familiar with the matter tells the WSJ that following Target's data breach the board has pressed CEO Gregg Steinhafel to spend more time in the public spotlight doing damage control, while running more day-to-day tasks has been delegated to a senior deputy. The rest of the article points out that the data breach comes at a less than ideal time as Target tries to fix its online strategy and Canadian operations, and goes on to summarise Steinhafel's management style and history at Target.

Reference Links:

- Wall Street Journal

Industries: Retail (Internet & Catalog), Retail (Department & Discount)

Primary Identifiers: TGT-US

Related Identifiers: TGT-US, AMZN-US

Subjects: Articles, Reports, Conjecture, Media Summaries, Published Reports