

Target says there have been "very few" fraud reports following card data breach - WSJ
Saturday, December 21, 2013 09:51:59 PM (GMT)

- Following a data breach that compromised 40M credit and debit card accounts, Target said yesterday that it has received "very few" reports of credit-card fraud. It added that it has no evidence that personal data such as birth dates or social security numbers were accessed during the breach.
- Target also said that it will offer shoppers 10% off at U.S. stores this weekend, and will offer free credit-monitoring services to people affected by the breach.

Reference Links:

- Wall Street Journal

Industries: Retail (Department & Discount)

Primary Identifiers: TGT-US

Related Identifiers: TGT-US

Subjects: Articles, Reports, Media Summaries

Related Stories:

- Customers unhappy with news of credit-card data theft from Target - WSJ
- Target confirms unauthorized access to payment card data in U.S. stores