As vice president, labor relations, Lewless will oversee the company's labor relations strategy and will report to Mike Elliott, JetBlue's chief people officer. Previously, Lewless spent 20 years working in human resources roles, including almost a decade at Horizon Air where he led human resources, as well as labor and employee relations for the airline.

"We've always said that our crewmembers are our greatest differentiator," said Elliott. "With nearly two decades of experience in human resources, employee engagement and labor relations, Chris will bring an invaluable perspective to how we can continue supporting our crewmembers as they deliver the JetBlue experience."

"It's an honor to join the JetBlue team," added Lewless. "I look forward to working alongside our crewmembers to grow and support this unique culture as the company continues its exciting evolution."

As vice president, information security, Rohrbaugh will lead and oversee the strategic planning and assessment of all JetBlue's information security strategies, policies, procedures and practices. He will report to Brandon Nelson, JetBlue's general counsel and corporate secretary. Prior to JetBlue, Rohrbaugh gained over 20 years of information security experience including work in financial services, military and government consulting.

"I am excited that Tim has joined JetBlue," said Nelson. "The safety and security of our airline is our number one focus, and this applies to all aspects of our business."

"I'm so pleased to join JetBlue and contribute to the protection of the airline and its customers' information," said Rohrbaugh. "Data stewardship and security are critical for any organization today, and I look forward to bringing my experience to JetBlue."
