

New York Times Sunday Edition Summary
Sunday, November 10, 2019 06:42:23 PM (GMT)

- Tech firms don't do enough to prevent proliferation of child sexual abuse imagery
 - Tech companies ban child sexual abuse imagery from their platforms, but search engines, social networks, and cloud storage are rife with gaps for criminals to result. For victims, the trauma of constantly recirculating photos and videos can be devastating. Companies mentioned: GOOGL, DBX, MSFT, FB, AMZN, AAPL, SNAP
- State Department in revolt against Trump
 - Inspired by colleagues who have stood up to far more powerful voices, a growing number of career diplomats are proudly defending American ideals and seeking to hold the Trump administration accountable. When open impeachment hearings begin next week, diplomats will be among the first to testify, despite receiving directives from the White House for administration officials to ignore requests to appear from Congress.
- New kind of suburbanization helping Democrats win elections
 - The densely populated inner ring suburbs around cities like Richmond, Atlanta, Houston, Denver, and elsewhere are turning blue, helping Democrats begin to breach Republicans' electoral firewalls.
- Corner Office: American Airlines CEO Doug Parker
 - Doug Parker has been CEO of three airlines, but the grounding of Boeing's 737 Max may present his biggest challenge yet.
- Lying, mistrust could hurt the economy
 - The political dangers and threat to a free press posed by a culture of lying in the highest circles of government has gotten plenty of attention. But what about the economy? Robert Shiller points to a substantial body of evidence suggesting that a societal atmosphere filled with lies or presumed lies might reduce economic growth rates. The reason is simple: businesses can't plan effectively when they don't know who or what can be trusted.

Industries: Unspecified, Aerospace & Defense, Retail (Internet & Catalog), Computer Hardware, Computer & Internet Services, Software & Programming, Airline

Primary Identifiers: AAL-US, AAPL-US, AMZN-US, BA-US, DBX-US, FB-US, GOOGL-US, MSFT-US, SNAP-US

Related Identifiers: AAL-US, AAPL-US, AMZN-US, BA-US, DBX-US, FB-US, GOOGL-US, MSFT-US, SNAP-US

Subjects: Media Summaries, Sunday NYT Summary